A doctor, lawyer, and a University of Virginia professor, Dr. Cameron Webb is passionate about having an impact on America's crippling healthcare system.

Dr. Webb completed a White House Fellowship in 2016-17, during which he spent his time working on issues such as education, workforce and criminal justice reform. Dr. Webb is a champion for health equity and is committed to advocating for the health needs of underserved and marginalized communities.

A native of Spotsylvania, Virginia, Dr. Webb currently resides in Charlottesville, VA with his wife, Dr. Leigh-Ann Webb, and their two children.
